Herdade in the Baixo Alentejo, in Salvada, Beja, land covered by the characteristic cork oak and holm oak forest, gently undulating, sparsely populated, where you can, on cloudless nights, have a view of the starry night as only in the deepest Alentejo.

The house was thought of as if it were a work of art, the result of a great love lived by two great Portuguese contemporary artists.

The design was crafted by Architect Bartolomeu Costa Cabral, recognized for his innovative fusion of contemporary and traditional elements, as well as his keen attention to harmonizing buildings with their environment. He places great emphasis on factors such as natural lighting, material cohesion, efficient spatial layout, and seamless integration of spaces.
